*To Josie,
LABAN!
Cory Aquino*

As we commemorate the first death anniversary of Ninoy, my children and I think of the happy events as well as of our sad moments. We have selected a number of photographs to present this very brief summary of the life and times of Ninoy. It is our humble tribute to the man who loved us dearly and who inspired us and so many others to lead more meaningful lives.

NINOY IN HIS SENATE OFFICE

"We should take note and take heed — that the public mood is no longer a show of mere impatience, but a mood steeled by a will to obtain their just demands; not just a mood of simple protest, but a mood sharpened by a need to redress and right their long — smouldering grievances."

From Ninoy's speech delivered February 10, 1969.

NINOY
IN RUSSIA
1969

"A visitor to Russia cannot escape arriving at the conclusion that it is a child-oriented society. Soviet leaders cannot seem to overdo themselves caring, bringing up, molding their young. The Soviet young, I was repeatedly told, is the state's first concern."

From Ninoy's series on Russia Today published in the Manila Times, August 20, 1969.

HIS TRIAL

NO SMOKING

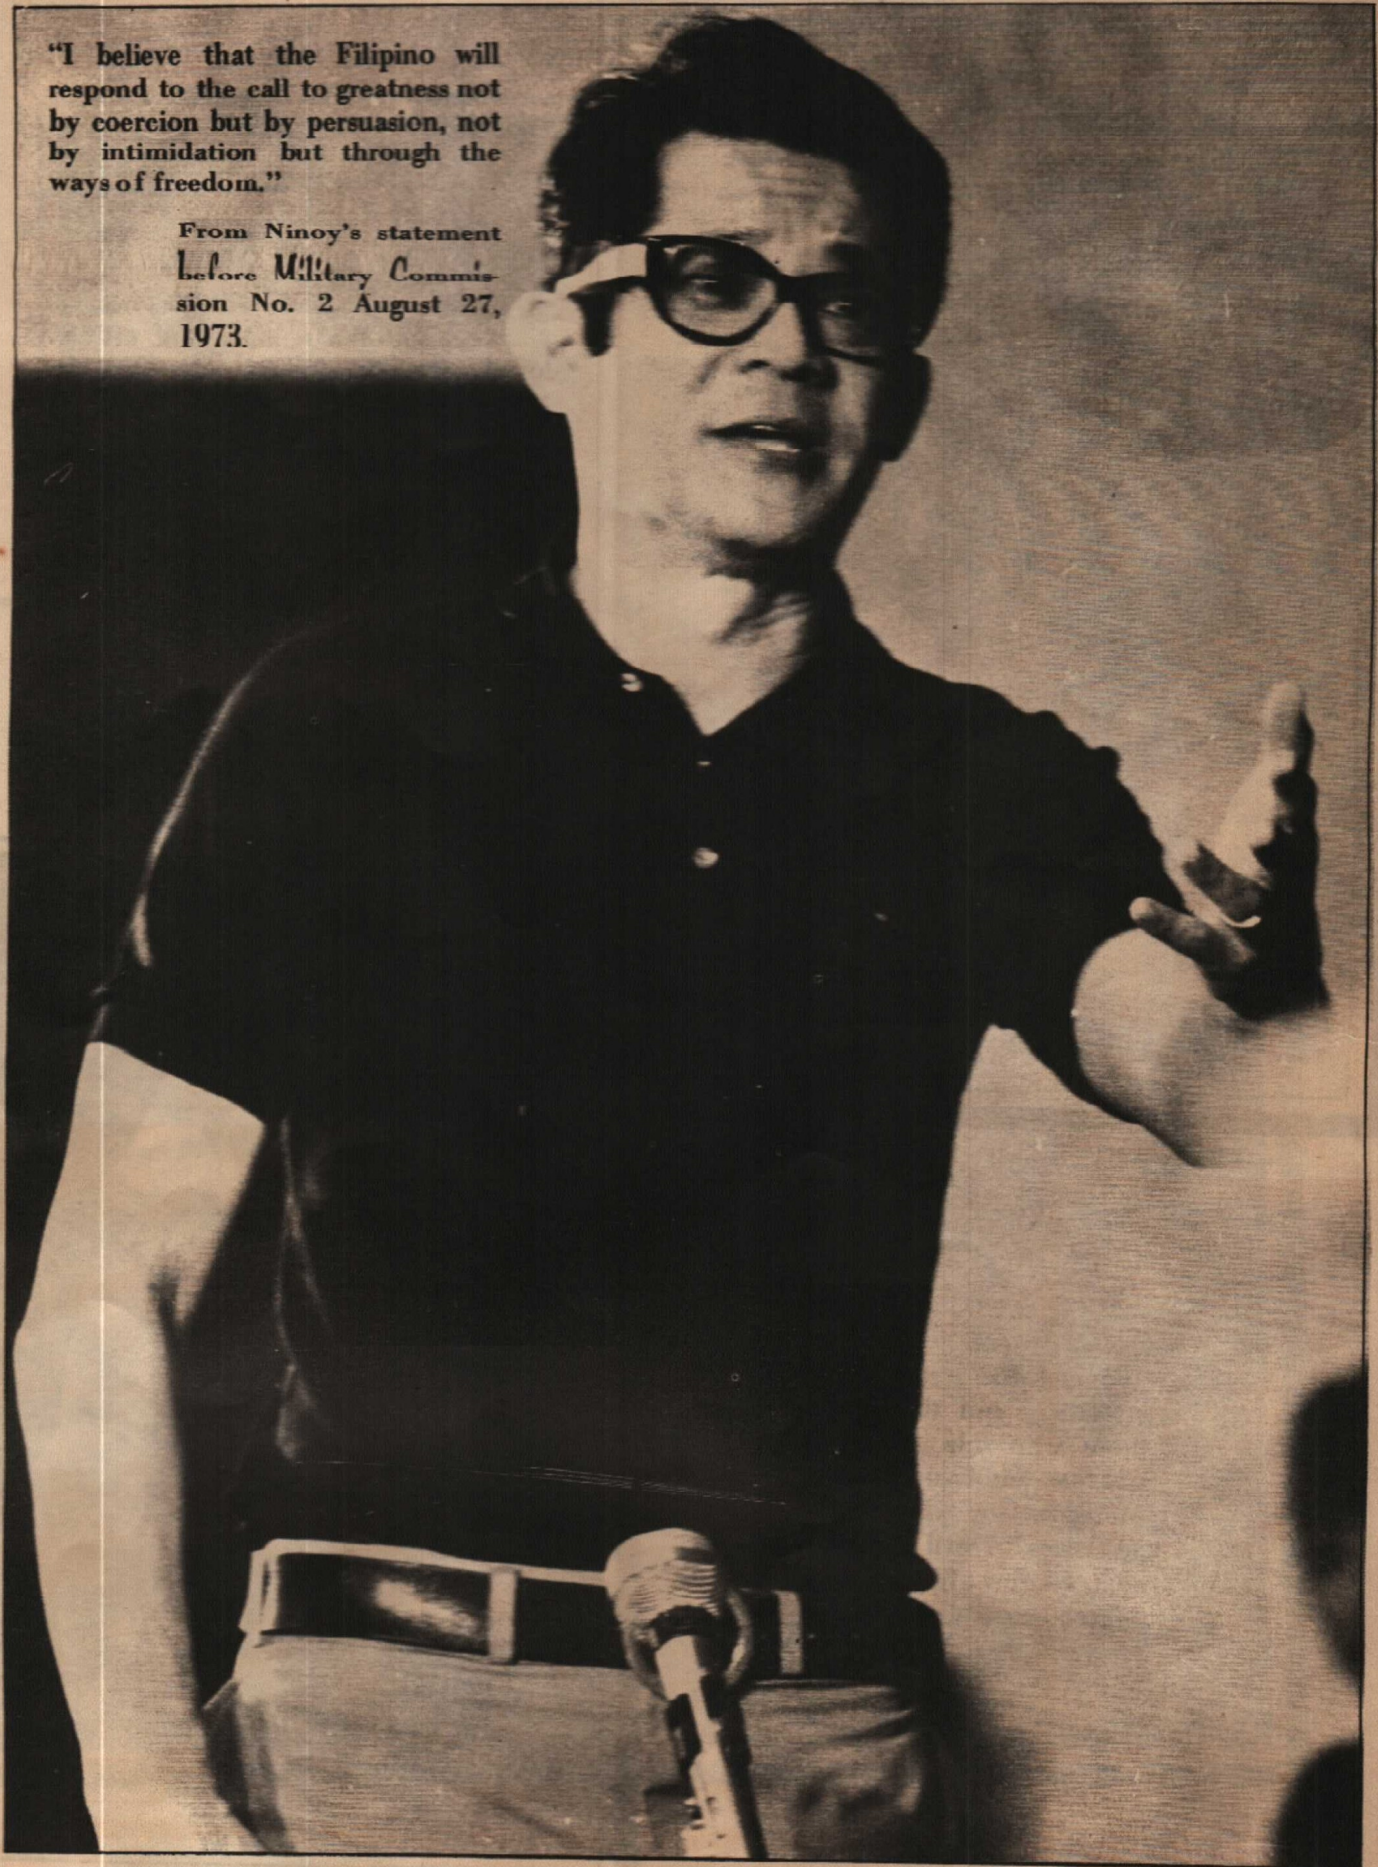

"I have a sacred duty to make this challenge so the whole nation will know, in God's own season, what kind of justice we have under martial law."

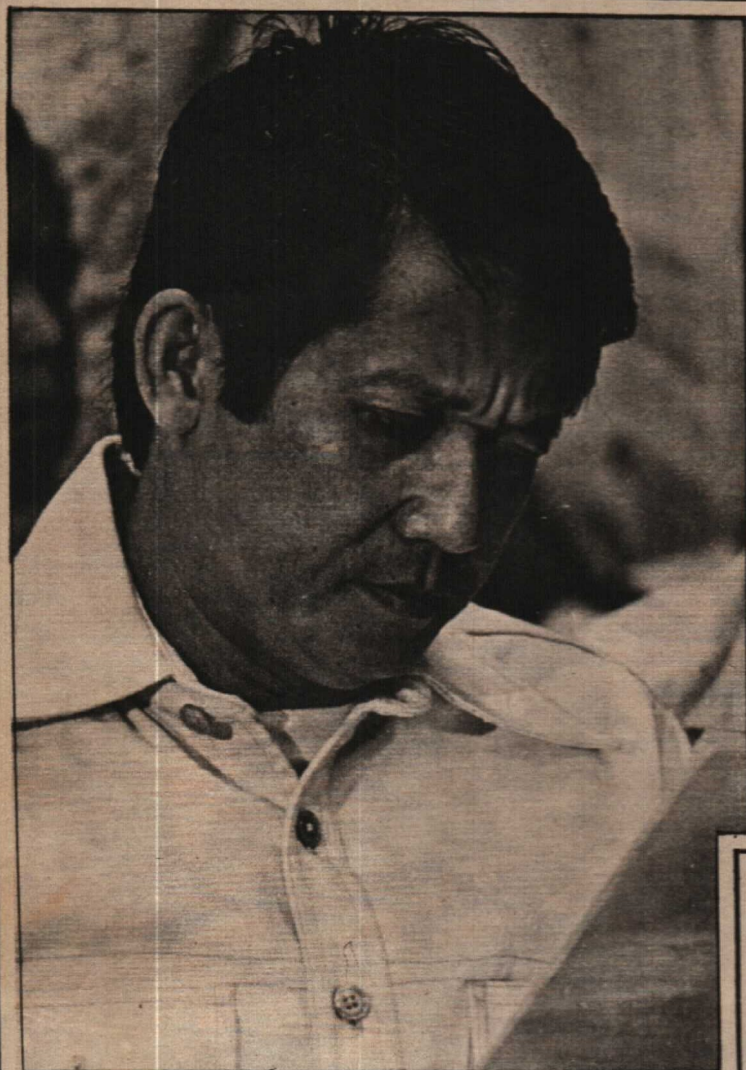

From Ninoy's statement before the Military Commission No. 2 August 3, 1976.

"I believe that the Filipino will respond to the call to greatness not by coercion but by persuasion, not by intimidation but through the ways of freedom."

From Ninoy's statement
before Military Commission No. 2 August 27, 1973.

Ninoy at the Supreme Court

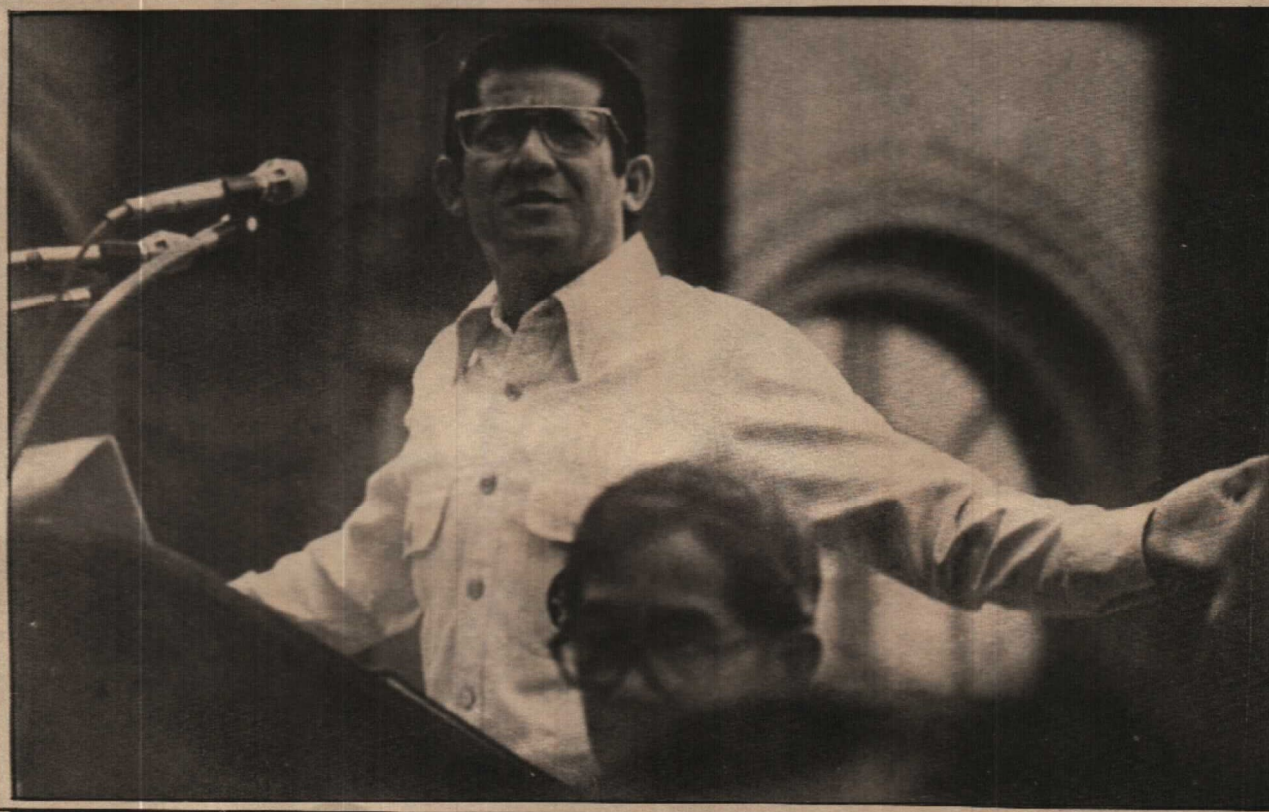

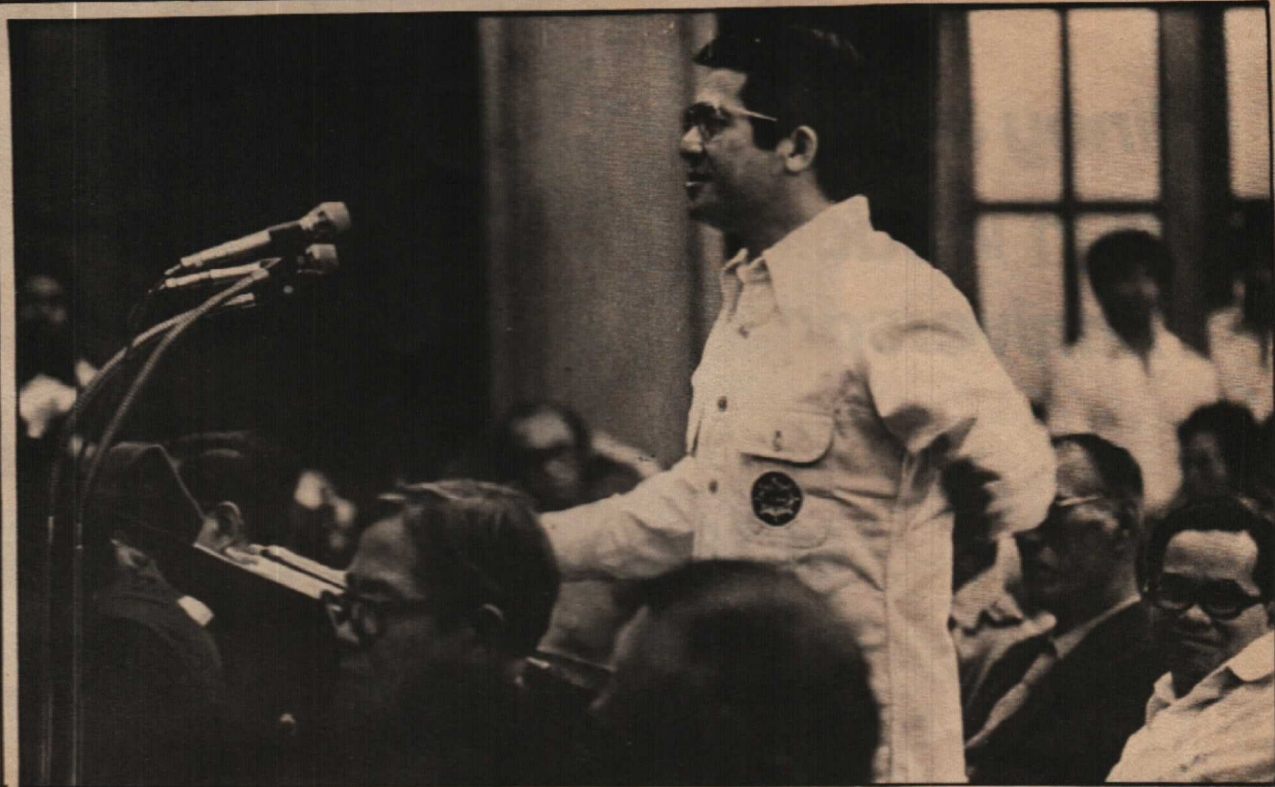

"I have been deprived of my freedom and the company of my loved ones for the last 1,890 days. Now that the delayed shock has set in, I want to cry but I have no more tears to shed, my eyes have run dry over this long dark night."

From a letter to the justices of the Supreme Court written Nov. 25, 1977.

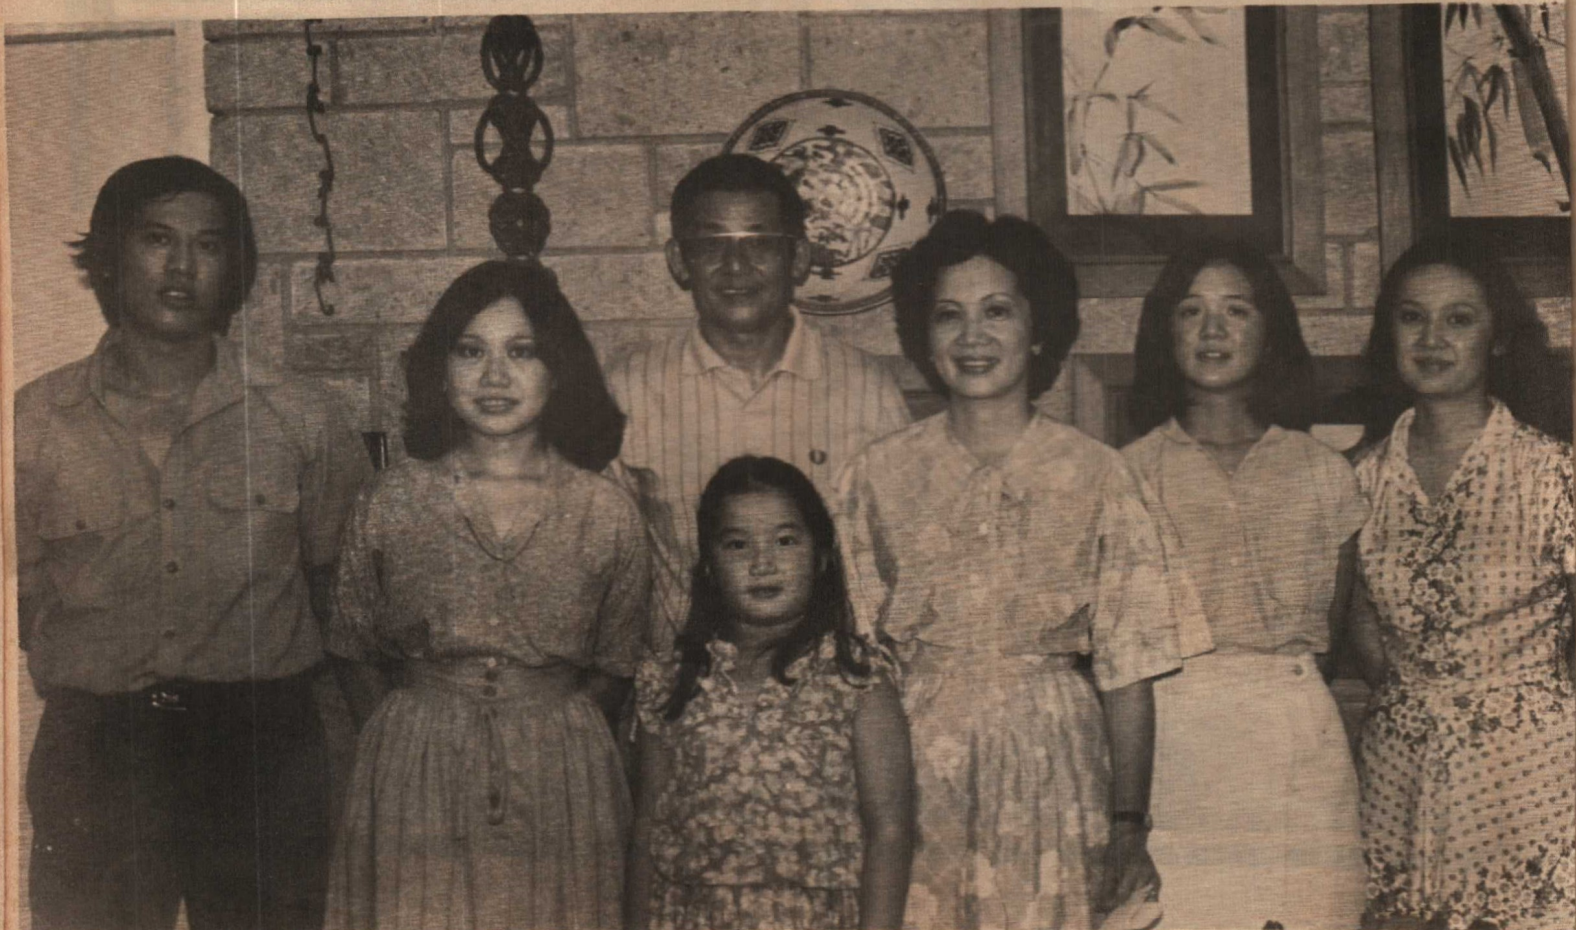

"Beyond the greed, the pride, the insolence and the pretensions of those who rule us through force and fear and fraud, there is a living, Almighty God who knows the dark mysteries of evil in the hearts of men. I know His justice, truth and righteousness will reign and endure forever."

From Ninoy's letter filed with the Supreme Court, April 15, 1975.

AUGUST
31, 1983

Once again, a year was stained by assassination. Moments after his return to the Philippines on August 21, opposition leader Benigno S. Aquino Jr., escorted by these three affable security officers, was shot in the head at Manila International Airport. One million mourners attended his funeral procession. A commission appointed to investigate the killing resigned amid charges that it was a rubber stamp for President Ferdinand E. Marcos, whose military cronies are suspected of complicity in Aquino's death. A second commission has yet to issue a report. President Reagan canceled a planned visit to the Philippines, which has two major U.S. military bases, and hopes dimmed that the economically ailing nation could establish an orderly succession to Marcos's 18-year rule.

I WISH I HAD MORE THAN ONE LIFE TO GIVE, FOR EVEN IF I HAD A HUNDRED LIVES, I WOULD NEVER BE ABLE TO REPAY
THE LOVE AND AFFECTION BESTOWED UPON ME BY OUR GREAT PEOPLE.
